

Solution:

In my opinion, the preferred stocks are a risky option compared to bonds for an investor. Consider this; a preferred stockholder is never assured of getting a dividend from a company, but a bond holder always gets an interest from the company. Also, when company liquidates, a bond holder will always have priority over any creditor (if it is an unsubordinated debenture or mortgage holder) & stockholder.