

Solution:

If a share is theoretically outstanding but neither authorized nor issued, then this means that the share cannot be outstanding because it is not issued. An outstanding share is issued and stands with the investor.

Thus, this means that outstanding shares are all issued and hence, any non-issued shares are non-outstanding.