

Solution:

Yes, the dealer is confused about the accounting terms. The term “income” has been confused with “sales” of the cars. The dealer talks about the price of the car and multiplies it with no of cars sold and calls it the income, which is in fact the definition of the sales of the car. The income is obtained only after subtracting the expenses that incurred in the purchase of cars, as well as maintenance.