

Solution:

Accounting is an art, and art is learnt only when you apply it on the real life. A person who wishes to learn accounting should try to see how well the concepts they learnt during their course would go for real life examples, since most of the companies be it large manganates like Google Inc, to a small shop involves the same set of accounting principles.

This means that a person who wishes to learn accounting should try to use real world examples to understand how these companies often use these principles.