

Solution:

Convertible stocks are a type of preferred stocks that offers the shareholders a right to convert the preferred stock into a certain equivalent of common stocks, at the behest of the shareholder, by the company. Such a stock offers a high security to the shareholders as conversion to a good number of common stocks increases their vote shares and enforces a higher dividends payment compared to other common stockholders.